

ABSTRACT

EN PASSANT: STORIES

This collection of stories reflects the nature of relationships one experiences throughout one's lifetime. Relationships are formed, quite often, in passing. They are bonds that seem strong and firm one moment, stretched to the breaking point the next. In cases where the bonds are severed, however, others are made to take their place. Whether the new ties are made stronger or weaker by experience is up to each individual to decide. This hefty decision can also be, and perhaps too often is, made in passing.

Christopher Scott Houston
May 2004