

ABSTRACT

INTERSECTION OF VIOLETS

Perhaps all poems arise from intersections. Sometimes they mark junctions of concrete locations in space or time. Sometimes they explore the connections between people. Sometimes they emerge where dissimilar forces mingle for a moment as they cross paths. In this collection I hope you recognize familiar intersections and discover unexpected ones.

Debora Palmer
May 2006