

Chicano and Latin American Studies

College of Social Sciences

Student Outcomes Assessment Plan (Soap)

I. Mission Statement

The Department of Chicano and Latin American Studies (CLAS) offers an interdisciplinary program that incorporates the experience of Chicanas/os/Latinas/os and Latin Americans using the literature of the Social Sciences, Humanities, Education, Community Studies, the Arts, and other subject areas. CLAS provides an opportunity for a pluralistic exchange of ideas in an interdisciplinary academic setting, where faculty, students, and visiting scholars can share experiences and create a dynamic and intellectual environment. The Department will graduate students possessing a strong knowledge of the principal cultural, intellectual, social, economic, and political currents that have contributed to the historical development of the Chicana/o/Latina/o and Latin American experience. Students will also possess an understanding of how interdisciplinary methodology can advance comprehension about the subject matter. Finally, the program is designed to prepare students for myriad careers, graduate study in numerous fields, and public service to the broader community. These aims align with those of the College of Social Science and also advance the aims of Fresno State.

II. Goals and Student Learning Outcomes

- A. Students will be provided with specific content knowledge on crucial issues and event, such as race/ethnicity, social class, and gender, which are significant in Chicano and Latin American area studies.
1. Students will demonstrate an understanding of the variable constructions and/or ideologies of race, class, and gender.
 2. Students will demonstrate knowledge of current and past issues that affect Latin Americans.
 3. Students will identify analyze sources of racism, classism, sexism, and homophobia that have contributed to the historic oppression of Chicanos/as and Latinos/as.

Benchmark: an A and a B are "meeting the standard" and a C is "partially meeting the standard" while a D and F are "not meeting the standard." The majority of the students will demonstrate that they "meet the standard".

- B. Students will be required to complete a diverse array of assignments and will receive feedback that will assist them in improving their critical thinking, research, and writing skills.

- 4 Students will demonstrate critical thinking skills and be able to express complex ideas in written assignments. A rubric for writing and peer review will be used.

Benchmark: an A and a B are "meeting the standard" and a C is "partially meeting the standard" while a D and F are "not meeting the standard." The majority of the students will demonstrate that they "meet the standard".

- 5 Students will demonstrate ability to conduct research using standard methodologies to critically evaluate evidence, to document the source of their information, and to write well-organized arguments supported by evidence.

Benchmark: an A and a B are "meeting the standard" and a C is "partially meeting the standard" while a D and F are "not meeting the standard." The majority of the students will demonstrate that they "meet the standard".

- C. Students will develop skills that enable them to identify norms and values associated with becoming part of a professional group.

- 6 Students will demonstrate an understanding of the requirements in terms of knowledge and behavior exhibited by professionals in fields relating to Chicano and Latin American Studies.

Benchmark: an A and a B are "meeting the standard" and a C is "partially meeting the standard" while a D and F are "not meeting the standard." The majority of the students will demonstrate that they "meet the standard".

IV. Assessment Methods

A. Direct Measures (at least three)

1. The Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment: In this assignment, students discuss and analyze a reading on Blackboard Discussion Board, peer review an editorial based on the reading and their discussion, and submit a final editorial. The Assignment created more opportunities for the students to write (low stakes) exercises. Additionally, by the time the students prepared their final research paper (high stakes work), they had gained editing and writing experience, and developed critical thinking skills and informational literacy.
2. Exams and/or Research Papers: Student examinations and research papers submitted in Upper-Division courses are used to assess content knowledge as well as the research and writing skills of students. For example, the CLAS 114 research paper involves an initial version and then a final version which are analyzed for quality of content and writing skills.
3. Information Literacy Assignment.
4. Peer Review Group Projects: A peer review rubric is used in multiple course sections, which is implemented by students and instructor, e.g., the rubric assists students by providing clear guidelines and expectations and the peer process gives students feedback for re-editing their writing assignment.

B. Indirect Measures

1. Alumni Survey – Students who have graduated were surveyed to determine whether they pursued further education or gained employment and were asked what aspects of the program most prepared them for further education or a career. Additionally, they were asked for recommendations and feedback to help the Department identify areas where faculty can further strengthen the program.

2. Student Survey – Students will take a survey at the end of the 2013-2014 academic year. They will be asked in what specific ways they benefitted from the program as well as their impressions in regard to various aspects of the program.

VII. Closing the Loop - Summary Evaluation, Curriculum Adjustment, and Reporting

The Department of Chicano and Latin American Studies has revised its assessment to more effectively evaluate the fundamental aspects of the program that prepare the students for their post B.A. pursuits. It is important to consider that most of the students in CLAS courses are non-CLAS majors. Based on the Department's previous assessments, the faculty re-worked its approaches and focus on the following areas in the current SOAP: (a) the development of student communication skills, (b) the furthering of their critical thinking abilities, and (c) the strengthening of their research skills.

The Department faculty administered the Alumni Survey, continued assessing and utilizing the Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment, which guides students in learning methods, in CLAS 30 courses and introduced it to CLAS 116 courses. In CLAS 170, the Department used technology software, Pearson's My Writing Lab program, to assist the students in developing and reinforcing their writing and critical analysis skills in connection to the research paper, and faculty developed a Student Survey to implement at the end of the 2013-2014 academic year. In addition, an Informational Literacy assignment was conducted in CLAS 130.

The result of these efforts is that the faculty now has the feedback to evaluate from the Alumni Survey. In the five CLAS 30 courses, in which the Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment was utilized, the majority of students met the standard outcome. The Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment continues to be assessed in CLAS 30 courses. The faculty introduced the Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment to CLAS 116 courses. Results for the Blackboard-based Discussion Board Assignment in the CLAS 116 courses are not available at this time. The faculty is in the process of developing a Student Survey at this time to implement at the end of the 2013-2014 academic year.

The faculty continues to implement rubrics (that provide a set of written guidelines for distinguishing between different levels of student work) along with the student research paper approach that requires an initial and final version of the paper (whereby it contributes to the development of student critical thinking skills and involves students in their work).

The CLAS Department will continue to revisit the assessment plan, recognizing it is an ongoing process of the educational mission of the Department and University.
