

University of Opportunity

More than fifty percent of Fresno State students are the first in their families to attend college. The University Migrant Services program helps create pathways for success for those whose academic success is challenged by factors such as poverty and limited English skills.

Directed by Raul Moreno, the program partners with Fresno County school districts to guide students to their potential. Programs operated under the Migrant Services umbrella offer enrichment activities such as chemistry and folk music for elementary school-aged children. Another program assists migrant and farm worker students by providing academic, personal, career and cultural services.

Fresno State is a university of opportunity for all.
