

Opening Doors to New Worlds

Few things fuel young imaginations like children's literature. At Fresno State, the nationally renowned Arne Nixon Center for the Study of Children's Literature is home to more than 47,000 books, manuscripts and illustrations.

Our collection reveals the enduring value of great storytelling. For centuries, children's books have nurtured wonder and showed youngsters – and adults alike – the power of words to illuminate the world in which we live. Children's literature also is an important tool for inspiring lifelong readers.

Under curator Angelica Carpenter, the Arne Nixon Center's collection at the Henry Madden Library has become one of North America's leading research centers for students, faculty and authors.
