“THE AGBU NUBAR LIBRARY IN PARIS:
SAFEGUARDING WESTERN ARMENIAN HERITAGE
THROUGH DOCUMENTATION, RESEARCH, AND PUBLICATION” AND "THE ARMENIANS IN ETHIOPIA "

by

Dr. Boris Adjemian, Paris, France

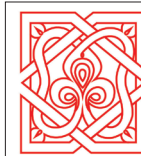

The AGBU Nubar Library is one of the most important Armenian research and resource centers in the Armenian Diaspora. With over 40,000 books, thousands of documents stretching back 200 years, 10,000 photographs and 1,500 periodicals, the library and archive is used extensively by academics, students, professional researchers and amateurs from Europe, America, Armenia, Turkey and the Middle East. The history of the Library is closely linked to that of the destruction and dispersal of the Ottoman Armenians in the early twentieth century. It has occupied a prominent place in the historiography of the Armenian genocide and continues to appear as a place of reference. Its current director, Dr. Boris Adjemian, will present the collections of the AGBU Nubar Library, its scientific activity and its contribution to the dissemination of knowledge.

Dr. Adjemian will also present his research on the ancient Armenian community of Ethiopia.

Dr. Boris Adjemian is a historian and the director of AGBU Nubar Library (Paris). He is also the editor-in-chief of the bilingual academic journal Études arméniennes contemporaines. He defended his Ph.D. in 2011 at École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales and Università degli Studi di Napoli.
