LEON S. PETERS ETHICS LECTURE

Engendering Migration

The Ethics of Immigration in an Unjust World

Shelley Wilcox

Wednesday, March 9
12-1 PM
Alice Peters Auditorium (UBC)

Existing injustices, such as racial discrimination and gender-based exploitation and violence, may impact just immigration policies. This talk addresses these issues, with particular attention to the experiences of women immigrants.

Shelley Wilcox, Ph.D. is associate professor of philosophy at San Francisco State. Her research focuses on social and political philosophy, applied ethics, feminist philosophy, global justice, immigration, and urban environmental ethics. She has published articles in the United States, Canada, and Europe.
