Dr. Paul Adams

Paul Adams, Ph.D., has been a teacher for over 20 years. Before coming to California State University, Fresno and becoming a professor, Adams received his master's and doctorate from University of Texas in Austin. Adams then took a teaching position at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge. While teaching in Baton Rouge,

Adams had a desire to come back to the west coast, so he applied to Fresno State. Prior to his arrival at Fresno State, Adams worked as a reporter and features editor at an Oregon newspaper.

At Fresno State, Adams taught journalism and public relations courses. He believes highly in education and reminded his students to take general education classes, because of they expose students to other fields making them well-rounded intellectually.

Since his retirement from Fresno State, Adams has traveled to Vietnam, Burma and Beijing teaching students particular research methods, American culture and English for wo years. Adams resides with his wife and son while teaching part-time at ITT Tech.
