Minor in Gerontology

Gerontological Specialist Certificate

Gerontology

Gerontology is the study of aging. Our nation's steadily increasing older population is creating a unique demand for well educated individuals to understand the field of aging and competent professionals to work with elders.

The Gerontology Program offers a minor and a certificate in gerontology. Both are designed to prepare students to address unmet and urgent needs in this rapidly developing field. Special majors can also be arranged for the student who wishes to concentrate on gerontology. The Gerontology Program attracts undergraduate students from all academic areas, reentry students, graduate students within social science and health professions, service providers, and elders seeking greater understanding of this stage of life.

The study of aging is based upon many important theories and concepts of aging, which are presented through an organized course of study. Core courses — gerontology and cross-listed interdisciplinary — are designed to present comprehensive biological, psychological, cultural and sociological theories related to the lifelong aging process. The influence of heritage, culture, and creativity are emphasized. The program presents information related to Healthy People 2010, services and resources; housing and environment; disabilities and rehabilitation; federal, state, and local agencies; and social policies and programs for elders.

Students have the opportunity to develop empathy for older adults as they explore communication and interaction with elders through community service, internships, and service learning. Current research findings are presented and research opportunities are available. There is an active student Gerontology Club.

Program Responsibilities

The Gerontology Program is responsible for the Gerontology Minor, Gerontological Specialist Certificate, and a variety of activities and conferences on aging.

Other programs housed within the office of the Gerontology Program include the California Geriatric Education Center (CGEC) San Joaquin Valley Program — a statewide interdisciplinary center supported by a grant from the Bureau of Health Professions, Public Health Service — providing educational offerings for health professionals and faculty; Elderhostel Program, the Fresno Learning Activities in Retirement (FLAIR), Friendly Visitor Services, and the Gerontology Education and Resource Center.

The Gerontology Program cosponsors the Gerontology Club, and offers continuing education for health professionals in cooperation with the Division of Extended Education.

Career Opportunities

The development of employment opportunities in the field of gerontology has emerged in response to the needs of a steadily increasing older population. Many occupational roles are available in different sites. These include but are not limited to federal, state, county, and city agencies; senior centers, adult day care centers; long term care facilities, intermediate care facilities, acute care hospitals, medical centers; and senior housing sites, retirement communities, home health agencies, hospices, legislative bodies, and community planning agencies. New programs are developing in eldercare, case management, and consultation in business.

There is an increased recognition of the importance of designing and providing specialized programs in the private sector. Knowledgeable people work as consultants in banks, travel agencies, large corporations, insurance companies, educational agencies, publishing and broadcasting agencies, and department stores. The field is wide open for creative and innovative individuals.

Gerontology Minor

The Minor in Gerontology (study of aging) is open to students in any major. It is designed to serve undergraduate majors in business; communicative sciences and disorders; child, family, and consumer sciences; health science; nursing; kinesiology; physical therapy; psychology; therapeutic recreation; social work; and sociology.

The minor consists of 15 semester units of credit. Students should register in the Gerontology Program Office and meet with the gerontology adviser if they plan to request a minor.

Note: The Gerontology Minor also requires a 2.0 GPA and 6 upper-division units in residence.

A Special Major for those interested in gerontology may be designed. The process for this is initiated through the Office of Advising Services, (559) 278-2924, Joyal Administration, Room 121.

Gerontological Specialist Certificate

The certificate will be awarded to students who complete a program of study consisting of 21 units of courses in gerontology. Students admitted to the program are expected to have had two years of college or two years of experience in the field of aging and some college courses.

Those who have completed the course of study may use the title "Gerontological Specialist." The following list includes the recommended content areas in the field of aging to be covered: an introductory course in gerontology, social policy, multicultural aging, physiological aging, psychological aging, sociological issues, internship, and social services. Coursework must be completed with a C or better.
