

International Service-Learning Opportunities in Fiji & Tanzania

May-June 2016

Two different, 2-week options and a 5-week option are available in each country.

The Program:

Fresno State is partnering with Madventurer, an international service organization, to work on rural community development projects in Fiji and Tanzania. Students will work with local community members on construction, public health and youth service projects. These are multicultural, international, service-learning trips, with participants immersing themselves in local culture, food, village accommodations, and daily life in the host country. There will be opportunities for excursions, cultural immersion and adventure experiences.

Learning Outcomes:

- Develop an understanding and a value of the importance of service and differing cultures
- Acquire insight into the life of villagers in Tanzania and Fiji through cultural immersion experiences and activities
- Learn about the best practices of global service and travel

Cost:

Program costs range from approximately $3,500 - $4,200, depending trip and length of stay option selected. (Grants of approximately $700 available for matriculated Fresno State students. Other fundraising is anticipated, which should significantly lower student's out-of-pocket expense.) Program costs covered include:

- Airfare
- Lodging in Fiji/Tanzania
- Program materials and support from Madventurer Leaders
- All meals provided most days
- Ground transportation in Fiji/Tanzania

What's excluded:

- Passport fee, meals for three days, and incidentals totaling approximately $300
- Course fees (approximately $100/unit)
- Travel insurance (approximately $60)

Continuing and Global Education

Due to the physical nature of the trip, very basic accommodations, and rough terrain it is highly recommended that you be in excellent health.
