

Dr. Jesus Canelon is a new Assistant Professor for the Computer Information Systems in the Department of Information Systems and Decision Sciences. He was an Assistant Professor of Information Systems at the University of Illinois at Springfield, Illinois since 2012. He also taught as an Adjunct Faculty at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona (2009-2011). He has taught courses in Enterprise Models, Business Process Management, E-Commerce, Decision Support Systems, and Data Mining. He has completed courses in networking, cryptography, and computer security at both graduate and undergraduate levels.

Dr. Canelon has published three journal articles in the Journal of Academy of Business and Economics, Academy of Educational Leadership Journal, and the European Journal of Business and Social Sciences. He has also published papers in several conference proceedings in the areas of online learning, and systems design using mobile phone technologies. His industry experience includes eleven years (1993-2004) as Software Engineer at the Polytechnic University, Barquisimeto, Venezuela.

Dr. Canelon was awarded a Ph.D. in Information Systems and Technology in 2001, and a Master of Science in Information Systems in 2008, both from Claremont Graduate University, California. He also received a Bachelor of Science in Software Engineering in 1995 from University Centrocidental, Venezuela.