ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE – CLIMATE/GLOBAL CHANGE ASSISTANT PROFESSOR (TENURE TRACK)

- Available for the Academic Year: 2006/2007
- Salary is dependent upon academic preparation and professional experience.
- Teaching Load is 12 units per semester plus 3 units of non-instructional responsibilities.
- Instructional Level: Undergraduate and Graduate

Specific Position Characteristics: The Department seeks a broadly trained environmental scientist who applies diverse modern approaches to conducting research in the areas of Atmosphere, and Climate or Global Change, including related fields (e.g., Glaciology or Palynology). Teaching responsibilities include undergraduate courses in environmental sciences and graduate courses specializing in the environmental aspects of the atmosphere, the hydrosphere, and their interactions. Specific teaching assignments will depend on Department needs. Other expectations include developing a sustainable, externally funded research program in environment science, supervising thesis research, mentoring students at the undergraduate and graduate levels, and service at all levels of university governance. The successful candidate may be called upon to teach in a distance education mode and will be encouraged to teach using web enhanced and/or web based instruction. Outcomes assessment and service learning are important components of the university curriculum. The successful candidate will be expected to work cooperatively with faculty and staff in the department, college and university.

Qualifications: Academic Preparation: An earned doctorate (Ph.D.) in a field of Environmental Sciences or related field is required for appointment to a tenure track position.

Teaching or Other Professional Experience: Candidates with university teaching and research experience or post-doctoral research are preferred. A demonstrated commitment to or potential for excellence in teaching, research and scholarly activity at the university level is required. The successful candidate must have the ability to work effectively with faculty, staff and students from diverse ethnic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds.
