Ag One Community Salute to recognize Fred Ruiz

Local food manufacturer Frederick R. Ruiz is the recipient of the Ag One Foundation's Community Salute for 2007

Ruiz, who is the chairman, co-founder and chief executive officer of the Dinuba-based Ruiz Foods, Inc., will be the honored guest of the gala which is slated for June 29 at the Fresno Convention Center, Exhibit Hall, downtown. Cargill is the naming sponsor of the event.

For many years, Ruiz has served on the boards of many business and community organizations, including University of California Board of Regents, California Chamber of Commerce, McClatchy Company, Gottschalk's, Inc., Hispanic College Fund, Inc., University of California, Merced, President's Advisory Board, California State University, Fresno, and as an advisor and founding member of the Institute for Family Business, California State University, Fresno.

Ruiz and his father, Louis, founded Ruiz Foods in 1964. Today Ruiz Foods has become the largest frozen Mexican food manufacturing company in the U.S. Ruiz Foods is based in Dinuba and has three manufacturing plants and two distribution facilities.

The company's frozen Mexican food products include such specialties as burritos, tamales and enchiladas. Ruiz Foods' frozen Mexican foods are sold in all channels of distribution: retail, convenience store, clubs, vending, industrial and foodservice. The signature brand is El Monterey. Ruiz is the market leader within the frozen Mexican food category and manufactures the number one brand of frozen Mexican food in the U.S.

The food company ranks second among the top 10 Hispanic-owned manufacturing firms in the U.S. and first among the top 10 U.S. Hispanic-owned companies in California.

The company has long been recognized for its innovative commitment to its employees and the community. "It's our corporate responsibility to do what we can to make the world a better place," explains Fred Ruiz. "It's my responsibility to be active in that role and to continue to look for ways to improve the lives of our Team Members and their families. But it goes beyond that... it's also important to be active in improving the future of our community... it's also important to be a role model everyone who has made my arrival at Fresno State so easy and fun! Here are some of the things I am thankful for and my wishes for the coming year.

People. How can I describe the great people I have met since arriving in Fresno? You have made me feel welcomed and supported. I continue to meet so many wonderful people associated with the college. The faculty, staff and students are dedicated and amaze me with their productivity and commitment to our mission.

Our volunteers as represented by Ag One members, alumni and friends are always there to step forward and serve in so many ways. For all of us in the college, you make our work at Fresno State rewarding. I note the Ag Boosters Barbecue, the wine tasting, and regional gatherings where I was

Meet the new dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences and Technology

By John Migliazzo
Fresno State Ag
Communications Major

Dr. Charles Boyer, Dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences and Technology, has taken an unconventional route to pursue a career in agriculture education. From the Oregon Coast to Fresno, Boyer comes prepared with a myriad of experiences in the academic world and in practical on-farm practices.

Growing up along the south coast of Oregon in the small town of Coquille, Charles Boyer had few connections to agriculture. Besides part-time jobs bucking hay bales and working for his uncle's cranberry box business, his experiences with agriculture were limited. However, he had a passion for biology, which eventually led to his career in horticulture.

"I went to college to be a biology teacher," Boyer said. After graduating with a bachelor's degree from Eastern Oregon University (EOU), he went on to receive a master's degree and Ph.D in genetics at Pennsylvania State University.

While at EOU, Boyer drove combine and worked in the seed cleaning facility at a grass seed company. Little did he know, this would pave his way to a career in the agriculture industry. He has spent the rest of his life in the field of horticulture.

When Boyer sits back to reminisce about his career choice, he can't help but smile. "I started off in teaching, and I ended up in fundamental research," Boyer said. In addition to Boyer's research in plant breeding, genetics and horticulture, he has been a successful professor and researcher of horticulture and has had heavy involvement with student groups and local organizations.

both as a researcher and a professor since he graduated from Penn State in 1976. He has spent significant time as a faculty member and professor at Rutgers (three years), Penn State (12 years), and most recently, Oregon State (13 years). At the time he came to California State University, Fresno, he was serving as the associate dean of agriculture at Oregon State.

Boyer has served as an advisor for Alpha Zeta, and an advisor for the Ag Student Council, both at Penn State. In addition, he advised the Circle K Service Club at Penn State and Oregon State, which is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

"I love being engaged with students," Boyer said. "Part of the attraction of Fresno State was to be more connected with students."

Boyer's Vision

Boyer has some very clear goals for the college including 1.) to grow the undergraduate program in both size and quality, 2.) to grow capacity to do applied research to meet the needs of the agriculture industry in the San Joaquin Valley, and 3.) to become the number one agricultural college in California.

Boyer said he was drawn to Fresno State by the diversity of agriculture in the region as well as the diversity of students.

"Students are highly valued," Boyer said. "Public agencies and industry are looking to hire, but there are not enough students to fill these needs. We need to enhance our reputation and fill that demand."

In terms of research, Boyer feels that it is his duty to bring the people, equipment and facilities together at Fresno State that are needed to grow capacity for applied research. In addition, he feels that the college needs more graduate students, as well as continuing to improve undergraduate programs.

Boyer has spent most of his career serving the agriculture industry. He has worked with many commodities to help bring students and faculty into research needed to benefit the industry. These commodities include hazelnuts, vegetable crops, berries, wine grapes, apples and nursery crops.

Having a career in horticulture, it is no shock that he has a hobby related to plant breeding. "I am an eclectic collector of advertisement and other items related to the seed industry and horticulture," Boyer said. In his office, you will find a collection of antique seed boxes advertising seed packets and seed companies from a variety of sources. In addition, he collects trading cards, produce crate labels, newspapers, magazines and other publications.

In addition, he is an avid sports fan. When he has a chance, he roots for his favorite professional teams, the Pittsburgh Steelers and the St. Louis Cardinals. With his teams winning the Super Bowl and a World Series Title this year, he has been very satisfied

Dr. Charles Boyer, at right, poses with Ag One Foundation director Pat Ricchiuti at this fall's annual CAST barbecue held on campus.

Boyer supports development of students who are going into the industry and finding solutions to present and future challenges that face the industry.

Outside of the Office

Boyer is engaged with a number of activities and hobbies outside the office. When time and weather allow, he loves to "try" to play golf in his spare time. He also referred to himself as a "rock hound," with the success of his sports teams in 2006. He also mentioned that he is fast becoming a Fresno State Bulldogs supporter!

Boyer has two grown children, Sabrina and Melanie. He has been happily married to Ilhama for the last five years.

Boyer is proud of his success at previous institutions, but is particularly excited about being a Fresno State Bulldog.

Ag Boosters Barbecue 2006 enjoyed by all

The 29th Annual Ag Boosters Barbecue to raise funds for the Ag One Foundation and California Women for Agriculture was a return to the early days of the event with more than 1,000 people holding tickets to the event at the Coombs' Riverbend Ranch.

Much success for this year's barbecue was attributed to the Harvest Sponsors. Businesses and individuals who supported the event as a Harvest Sponsor included: J.G. Boswell Company, Clifford E. Bressler & Associates, Britz Fertilizers, Inc., Chicago Title Company, Dalena/Benik & Associates Insurance Services, Pacific Gas and Electric Company, Pearson Realty, Prudential Ag Investments/Capital Ag Property Services, Rain & Hail Insurance, RCO Ag Credit, Inc., Ron Silva Realty, Inc., State Compensation Insurance Fund, Union Bank of California, Wawona Frozen Foods, Wells Fargo Bank, and Western Farm Service, Inc.

The annual event provides an opportunity to enjoy an evening of tasting Fresno State wine and sampling cheese produced by valley dairy processors, eating dinner under the stars and bidding on exciting auction items. The event featured CWA's County Store, Fresno State sausage tasting, Fresno State ice cream, a raffle and door prizes plus a live and silent auction.

In addition, the winner was selected for the Ag One "Fantasy Vacation" raffle, which offers a choice of destinations to Costa Rica, Greece, or China. Sponsors of the vacation drawing were Baker, Peterson & Franklin, LLP, Westside Finance LLC, and Campos Brothers Farms. This year's winner was 2004 alumnus Jason Sanders.

The Ag Boosters Barbecue raised more than $29,000 for the Ag One Foundation, and the Fantasy Vacation provided an additional $7,000 in donations.

Ag One President Tim Vaux welcomed the crowd to the annual barbecue.

graciously hosted and introduced to wonderful Bulldog supporters as great examples of the support we receive. Everywhere I am greeted by loyal supporters – what a tribute to the Bulldog family.

Community. What a wonderful community; Fresno has so much to offer! The diversity of the campus, city and valley provide a vibrant community in which to live.

The individuals and families engaged in our diverse agriculture and food systems industries in the valley are a close-knit community in a rapidly growing metropolitan area. It amazes me how interconnected we are in this community. Your commitment to CAST and so many other important parts of our community ensures our future. It is a pleasure for the college to partner with and serve you.

The Future. I am thrilled with the possibilities for the coming year. We are in the early stages of the university's Comprehensive Campaign which will provide important fiscal support for our programs. However, more importantly the campaign will provide the catalyst for us to engage with our partners as we chart the future for the college and move toward our Centennial Year in 2011.

I look forward to creating an environment in which all our students, faculty and staff can realize their goals, dreams and be nurtured to continue to develop. I am enthusiastic about the opportunity to work with you to create an exciting future. On a personal note, I look forward to continuing to become an integral part of and serving this amazing community.

I wish you and yours the happiest of holidays and may your New Year be filled with joy and success.

Fresno-Madera Wine Tasting draws big crowd

As the popularity of Fresno State wines grow, so does the annual Fresno-Madera Alumni and Friends Wine Tasting held in late-October at the Campus winery.

Close to 200 people were on-hand to sample and buy some of Fresno State's award-winning table and dessert wines. The World Cooperage Barrel Room served as the venue to showcase the Solare dessert wine made in the ice wine style first produced in Germany in 1794.

Featured wines included a 2005 Pinot Gris, 2005 Viognier, 2004 California Rose, 2005 Barbera, 2004, Syrah, and 2003 Solare. In addition, Fresno State-produced olive oil, sausage, table grapes and chocolate covered raisins and almonds were on-hand for participants' enjoyment.

Dr. Robert Wample, chair of the Viticulture and Enology Department, welcomed the crowd and discussed the new additions and changes in the University's winery. Fresno State students produce award-winning wines, while at the same time receive a hands-on practical education about the art and science of wine-making.

Ag One Board Member Rod Stark pours a glass of Fresno State wine at the Oct. 27 wine tasting.

Common Threads Award luncheon set for April 13

Five special women from the central San Joaquin Valley will be honored on Friday, April 13 as the 2007 recipients of the 11th Annual Common Threads Awards, honoring women in agriculture for their community service and philanthropy. Receiving the 2007 Common Threads honors are Louise Draxler, of Kings County; Sandra Gist-Langiano, of Tulare County; Linda Hansen, of Fresno County; Sharon Thornton, of Merced County; and Lonna Torrico, of Fresno County.

The awards are presented in partnership with the Ag One Foundation, Fresno State's College of Agricultural Sciences and Technology and the California Agricultural Leadership Foundation.

The Common Threads Award recognizes women who have made a remarkable and visible contribution to the enhancement of their communities. The award criteria requires the recipients to live in one of the five counties listed above, to have past or present roots in agriculture, and to have shown outstanding involvement of time, talent and treasure in agriculture and their communities.

The Common Threads Committee members are: Kim Rogina, Merced, co-chair and Karri Hammerstrom, Kingsburg, co-chair; Amy Bartell, Fresno; Ann Bridges, Sanger; Carol Chandler, Selma; Amy Christensen, Sacramento; Jackie Giacomazzi, Hanford; Alcidia Freitas Gomes, Fresno; Liz Hudson, Sanger; Debbie Jacobsen, Easton; Shirley Kirkpatrick, Exeter; Barbara Matheron, Hilmar; Christy Melvold, Fresno; Nancy Pitigliano, Tipton; Rod Stark, Fresno; Betty Young, Merced and Sarah Clark Wolf, Fresno.

Net proceeds raised from the luncheon go to the Agricultural Leadership Foundation, Ag One and charities of the honorees' choice. Invitations will be mailed in February. Contact the Ag One office at (559) 278-4266 for details.

for young Hispanics and help them realize that with an education and a commitment to hard work they, too, can live the 'American Dream.'"

With this commitment in mind, Ruiz Foods not only offers an excellent employment package but also offers a tuition reimbursement program, extensive new-hire orientation, health screenings, homeownership education classes, vocational English or Spanish, basic math classes and a variety of training classes.

Likewise, Ruiz assisted in establishing the non-profit status of Ruiz 4 Kids – an organization comprised of Team Members from Ruiz Foods who recognize a need to help area children. Through two annual fundraising events, Ruiz 4 Kids distributes scholarships and supports children-related programs within local communities – distributing more than $1 million to children in need.

Proceeds from the event will be used to establish the Ag One - Fred R. Ruiz Endowment. Sponsorship opportunities are available at various levels. Contact the Ag One office at (559) 278-4266 for details.
