

2016 Child and Family Science

Research in Progress

March 8th – Jessica McKenzie

Divine Self and Selves: Intergenerational Perceptions of Religion in Northern Thailand

Sarah Tsutsui and Seema Prakash, recent CSUF Child Development graduates, will share preliminary findings of the qualitative research they have been conducting with Dr. McKenzie over the past six months. Focusing on religious beliefs and perceptions of Buddhist monasticism among urban and rural Thai adolescents and parents, this work addresses the religious implications of globalization in rapidly changing cultural contexts.

*Sponsored by the Department of Child, Family, and Consumer Sciences
California State University, Fresno*

Tuesday, March 8th, 2016
Henry Madden Library Room #2108
12:30-2pm
Light lunch provided, presentation and sandwiches to start at 12:30.
Please RSVP so we have a headcount for food.
brossett@csufresno.edu