

2016 Child and Family Science

Research in Progress

April 12th – Amber Hammons

Transdisciplinary Obesity Prevention Research Sciences (TOPRS) Program

TOPRS is a collaborative project that involves researchers from the University of Illinois, Purdue, and Fresno State. The goal of the TOPRS program is to develop a web-based transdisciplinary curriculum on the causes and consequences of obesity. In her talk, Dr. Hammons will describe the curriculum design, implementation, and evaluation of the pilot course that was taught here at Fresno State.

*Sponsored by the Department of Child, Family, and Consumer Sciences
California State University, Fresno*

Tuesday, April 12, 2016

Henry Madden Library Room #2108

12:30-2pm

Light lunch provided at 12:30. Presentation will begin at 1pm. Please RSVP so we have a headcount for food.

brossett@csufresno.edu