

Site Access Agreement

Introduction

PG&E and the Agricultural Pumping Efficiency Program operated by the California State University, Fresno Foundation (CSUFF), have the objective of maintaining and improving pumping plant performance and reducing overall pumping energy use. This program is funded through a Public Purpose Program Charge paid by California utility ratepayers. These monies are managed under the auspices of the California Public Utilities Commission and PG&E. While CSUFF program staff and the staff of the pump test company [enter the pump test company name here] will be compensated through these monies, neither CSUFF program staff nor the staff of the pump test company are employees or representatives of the California Public Utilities Commission or of Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Agreement Clause

I agree to give [enter the pump test company name here] staff access to my property described as:

_____
Property Name where Pumps to be tested are located

_____
Address

_____
City and/or Zip Code

so that an evaluation of my eligible pump(s) can be performed. I realize that during the course of the evaluation it may be necessary to install monitoring equipment in order to properly evaluate the pumping system. I understand that any agreement to evaluate my eligible pump(s) is a business arrangement solely between [enter the pump test company name here] and me. Neither the Agricultural Pump Efficiency Program, Center for Irrigation Technology, the California State University, Fresno Foundation, nor any other entity guarantee the work of [enter the pump test company name here]. I understand that receipt of an evaluation does not obligate me in any way or guarantee that further program benefits will be extended to my business. I currently receive service as either a gas or electric business customer of Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

This Access Agreement shall expire at the end of business on December 31, 2011.
