Position Summary: The department of Literacy, Early, Bilingual, and Special Education in the Kremen School of Education and Human Development is accepting applications for a tenure track position in Special Education in the area of moderate to severe disabilities at the Assistant Professor rank with a Fall 2015 start date. The successful candidate will have knowledge of pedagogical theories and instructional practices and characteristics of inclusive programs for the instruction and assessment of students with predominately severe physical and cognitive disabilities. The successful candidate will teach courses primarily in the Moderate/Severe Disabilities Specialization, including assessment and instruction in functional curriculum, as well as introductory and research courses in Special Education. Instruction may encompass inclusion models, universal design/accessibility, community-based programs, transitional strategies, assistive technology, behavioral interventions (such as positive behavior supports, applied behavior analysis, and functional assessment), communication, special health care procedures, and career/vocational training, from birth through the adult years using standards-based concepts. The position also requires field supervision, master's thesis/project supervision, and student advisement. Specific assignment is dependent upon departmental needs. The successful candidate will teach in face-to-face university and partner school site classrooms with the aid of technology and web-based materials or may be called upon to teach some classes online.

Overview: Teacher Education was established as the first degree at Fresno State in 1911. The Kremen School has been nationally accredited (NCATE) since 1954 offering 34 distinct credentials, many Masters' degree programs, and a Doctorate in Educational Leadership. In 2013, the Kremen School was nationally recognized for its partnership work with regional districts and by AACTE earning the Outstanding Character, Moral and Ethical Development award. Fresno State has special education credentials in Mild/Moderate, Moderate/Severe, and Deaf Education, and supports the elementary and secondary credential programs in area such as differentiation and inclusive education.

Required Education: An earned doctorate (Ph.D. or Ed.D.) in Special Education or closely-related disciplines from an accredited institution (or equivalent) is required; however, applicants nearing completion of the doctorate (ABD) may be considered. For continued appointment in the tenure track position, the doctorate must be completed by 8/12/2016.

Required Experience: Candidates are required to demonstrate successful public or private school teaching experience with students with moderate to severe physical and cognitive disabilities. The successful candidate must have the ability to demonstrate a commitment to working effectively with faculty, staff, and students from diverse ethnic, cultural, and socioeconomic backgrounds. Candidates must demonstrate an active and current scholarly interest in Special Education.

Preferred Qualifications: Preferred candidates will have demonstrated success in teaching at the university level. In addition, preference will be given to candidates with three or more years of teaching experience in K-12 Special Education (moderate/severe settings); experience collaborating with general education teachers to adapt instruction for students with severe disabilities; and experience in program administration and development, including the pursuit of internal and external funding, and community involvement

Application Procedures: To ensure full consideration applicants should submit all application materials by October 24, 2014. Applications will be considered until the position is filled. Complete the on-line application at jobs.fresnostate.edu and attach the following materials (1) a cover letter specifically addressing required experience and preferred qualifications; (2) curriculum vitae; (3) list of three professional references with phone numbers and emails; and (4) unofficial transcripts. Upon request, finalists will mail official transcripts and three current professional letters of recommendation to the search committee chair.
