In order for us to continue processing your student’s 2014-2015 financial aid application, we need to verify your 2013 income and wages. The best way to verify income is to utilize the IRS Data Retrieval functionality on the FAFSA- either in the initial filing of the FAFSA, or by submitting a correction at www.fafsa.gov. While in most cases no further documentation is needed to verify transferred income information, you could still be asked for additional information or documents to verify income.

MARITAL STATUS & TAX FILING STATUS

If your marital status is "Married," there are two standard options for your IRS tax filing status:

- Married Filing Separate
- Married Filing Jointly

In very limited situations, a married tax filer may have a filing status other than the two listed.

If your marital status is "Married" and you filed your taxes with a status of anything other than the two options listed above you must include the following when submitting your IRS Tax Return Transcript and Income Verification Form:

⇒ A signed letter from your TAX PREPARER

- The letter should be on letterhead, and must explain why your filing status meets IRS regulations.

NOTE: Failure to submit the letter with your Income Verification documents will delay processing of your student's file.
